

Harmony at the push of a button

This is a delight for those who love the finer details. When the baseboard—and even the smallest corner trim – matches the flooring perfectly, whether it’s rustic oak, Italian terracotta, or modern vinyl. Baseboard manufacturer FN Neuhofer ensures that every surface matches the floor – thanks to state-of-the-art in-house digital printing technology.

An interior in which the flooring and baseboards are perfectly coordinated exudes tranquility, elegance, and design clarity. Instead of visible transitions or deliberate contrasts, the focus is on the surface as a whole, creating a cohesive look for the room. To offer its customers optimal decor matching, FN Neuhofer invested in state-of-the-art digital printing technology years ago and established its own center of excellence at its headquarters in Zell am Moos – dedicated to ensuring harmony between flooring and decor.

All from a single source. All under one roof

The world of flooring is diverse and brings forth new design variations year after year. Solid wood parquet, natural stone, tiles, laminate, vinyl... And every floor needs trim. Digital printing opens up nearly unlimited possibilities for a consistent design language.

Baseboards, floor profiles, door frame profiles, corner strips—every detail forms a visual unity with the floor’s design. Of course, FN Neuhofer’s wall panels can also be produced to match the look of the floor. “Our FN Acustico digiprint wall elements consist of MDF slats that are either coated with film for laminate and vinyl floors or with veneer for parquet floors and digitally printed with the matching design,” explains Ortwin Zeilner, Head of Product Development and Marketing.

It’s a match!

To ensure a perfect design match with first-class results, the original must serve as the basis. The floor samples sent in are scanned and digitized at FN Neuhofer. This design data is then printed in brilliant quality onto the moldings and wall panels. Finally, a tactile quality control check is performed, and the original floor sample is compared with the freshly printed molding. It’s a match!
